CONTINENTAL EDUCATION

INTRODUCTION

THE world is becoming more international. With every new invention—aerial transport, wireless—another national barrier is broken down and distance annihilated. More and more the countries of the world are coming together. More and more does it become necessary for every one of us to know other tongues, other customs and other countries than our own. For us—and still more for our children.

Once, foreign travel and foreign education were privileges only of the wealthy, but to-day at no great expense parents can give the finish to their daughters' education that only foreign study can impart. They can also send their sons abroad to study foreign languages, a knowledge of which is becoming more vital every day. The business man of To-morrow, besides learning local conditions of the country where he is to sell his goods, must learn the language as well, for in the peoples' own language he will see things from their point of view as well as his own.

To-day therefore, far more parents than ever before find themselves faced with the problem of choosing the right school, tutor or family abroad. Also, the choice offered having increased in like proportions, right selection becomes the task of a specialist.

The publishers intend that this directory should serve as a useful guide and that from its pages the reader may see where the principal schools are and learn something of their nature and scope. They are always pleased to supplement information regarding any one school mentioned therein, or to make recommendations from among other schools registered on their books to meet a particular case. In this connection attention is drawn to the questionnaires appearing opposite page XVI.

Messrs. MONDOVER have made a very thorough study of the comparative advantages the foreign schools offer and, by regular inspection and reports from their correspondents, receive up-to-date information regarding changes in school management and routine. It is also their custom to obtain the personal views and opinions of parents whose children they have placed and this valuable information is carefully tabulated for the benefit of future enquirers.

In some cases a parent will find that a private family, where suitable young companionship is provided and where a few pupils are received, will better suit the requirements of an older boy or girl than a school. To meet such cases Messrs. MONDOVER have at all times suitable addresses they can recommend in France, Switzerland, Italy and Germany, etc. and about which they will be pleased to write in any individual case.

As in the case of the preceding Edition a section has been reserved in the Directory for schools in England prepared to receive children from abroad, particulars of which will be found after the Continental sections.

The school announcements are preceded by an index arranged in school categories (classified lists), and there is also, at the end of the volume, an alphabetical list of schools and an index to school principals.

SOME FEATURES OF EDUCATION IN FRANCE

FRANCE is rightly considered an ideal country for the completion of a child's education. In this great land, so full of historical and literary associations and among numerous art treasures, the child will find the natural complement of its own racial qualities. It will also be found that the benefit of a long stay among French people will not end after the acquisition of their very beautiful language. There is about France a refining influence comparable to that of ancient Greece, which will often help to shape the mind in a few months better than years of scholastic study at home.

Education in France is very largely under State control. Its aim is the development of intellect, for as we know, the true basis of French hierarchy is intellectual distinction. The secondary Schools or Lycées, dotted all over the country, are built on a uniform pattern, and their teaching staff organized on a national basis as part of the Civil Service. These teachers, moreover, only teach the subject in which they specialize and pass from one Lycée to another very much as an officer changes in his garrison. The schools maintain a high standard of instruction and thanks to the State subsidy the fees are very moderate. The majority, however, are for day pupils only. As we have previously explained, the basis of French education is the formation of intellect, whereas that of the character and will are left very much to the care of the family. Thus, in the majority of the Lycées, no provision is made for outdoor games, and here again this is largely a matter for the parents or pupils to arrange elsewhere. It should further be borne in mind that a good knowledge of the French language is invariably desirable in the case of foreign pupils if they are to follow the classes with profit. (For prominent exceptions to the above remarks see the announcements of Lycées which can be recommended for English pupils in the following pages).

In a general way therefore it is to the private school that most foreign parents turn when the time comes to send their children to France. For a girl of sixteen or seventeen a finishing school, assuring the necessary direction of studies, will generally be found most suitable. There are many such schools in Paris—the centre of education in France—as well as in other districts, and pupils are always assured a large amount of individual attention. The principal study of course is the French language, history and literature, and this is combined with visits to places of historical interest. Extra subjects can be taken as required, such as music, painting, domestic science, etc.

For girls of all ages there is a limited number of good private schools, especially in the Paris district. These schools, though not actually under the State, are yet subject to regular inspection by that body, and in a number of them special arrangements are made for foreign pupils not knowing the language sufficiently well to join the normal classes. Some mention should also be made of the convents, though these establishments have no official recognition.

Returning to the question of boys' schools, reference must first be made to the "Ecoles Nouvelles." These are private schools largely run on English Public School lines, with the "House" system and encouragement of outdoor games, for which there are good playing grounds. The number of these schools is increasing to meet the requirements of a growing number of French people in favour of the English system and they play an important rôle in the educational system of the country. These schools receive boys of all ages.

There is also, as in the case of girls, a limited number of good private schools for boys, where foreign pupils will generally receive more individual attention than can be obtained in the large Lycées.

For an older boy coming to France to prepare for a qualifying examination in French there are excellent tutoring establishments under both native and English teachers, where a few pupils only are received and given the maximum amount of individual attention with good opportunities for outdoor games and sports.

Mention should also be made of the few English and American schools for both boys and girls in districts where there is an English speaking colony. In these schools pupils of all ages are generally received and in addition to a close study of the French language they can also be prepared for the examinations of their own country. (In the case of American pupils, they can sit for the American College Entrance Examination in Paris).

It would not be fitting to conclude this article without mentioning the various schools of Art, Music, Domestic Science, Physical Culture, etc. in which Paris particularly abounds, and which welcome students from abroad. It should be noted, however, that these schools are for non-resident pupils only and foreign students must therefore find accommodation in a private family or pension. (In this connection Messrs. MONDOVER always have on their books a number of such families whose homes they have inspected and which they can recommend). There are also good Tutors available, especially in Paris, for private coaching.

EDUCATION IN SWITZERLAND

EDUCATION has always been the central point of life in Switzerland ever since the times of the two great Swiss educators, Jean-Jacques Rousseau and Pestalozzi. Geneva, to quote only one instance, is spending a third of her budget on educating her citizens, and to-day the nation attributes its very existence to this popular veneration for learning. The formation of character, logical thinking, and the development of intellect and individuality are the aims of the Swiss Educators, but it must not be supposed that this is to the exclusion of sport and recreation, which are plentiful and conducted on modern lines.

As in other countries on the Continent education in Switzerland is State controlled, whether the schools be public or private. The public schools, however, receive day pupils only, and parents wishing to place their children in a residential school turn naturally to the private boarding establishments. For young people coming from foreign countries to study languages in connection with their other schooling, these establishments fulfil every purpose. Apart from the health-giving properties of the Swiss air, they are situated in good, up-to-date buildings amid beautiful surroundings, and offer the best facilities for all forms of sport. It is thus that we find Lausanne—for many years a favourite centre, particularly with English and American parents—with its mild and dry climate and its schools splendidly situated on rising ridges overlooking the Lake ; Geneva, with its world-wide intellectual reputation and wonderful panorama of views towards Mont-Blanc, the Alps and the Jura Mountains ; Montreux, with its picturesque and varied country, particularly noted for the softness of its air ; and at a higher altitude Château d'Oex, Gstaad, Villars, renowned for their excellent effect on growing children, to mention only a few centres in French-speaking Switzerland. Then in German-speaking Switzerland we find Berne, that historical old town of scientific and literary renown ; St. Gall, Teufen, noted for their particularly good air, and many other centres where besides German, French is also taught.

The private schools for girls receive pupils between the ages of ten and twenty approximately and conclude with a finishing course. In this way a girl, after receiving a general education, is able, if so desired, to complete her studies in languages, literature and the arts in the same establishment. In many of those schools too, pupils can be prepared for English and American examinations, whilst Domestic Science is also a strong feature.

A parent should have no difficulty in being able to make suitable arrangements for a boy. Apart from the well established private Swiss Boarding Schools there are schools under English and American direction for boys of all ages, where they can be prepared with special reference to modern languages for examinations of their own countries. Mention should also be made of the "Ecoles Nouvelles," where the aim is to combine book learning with practical manual training ; small home schools for young children of both sexes, and special schools for delicate children, situated at suitable altitudes and amid beautiful surroundings.

It should also be noted that there are in Switzerland recognized centres for the English College Entrance Examinations and the School Certificate. Also that, for the convenience of Americans, examinations are held at Geneva under the auspices of the American College Entrance Examination Board of New York.

In conclusion we would draw attention to the fact that Switzerland is rich in technical schools and in all the important towns will be found schools of Commerce, Art, Music, Horticulture, etc. Mention should also be made of the national watchmaking industry and the world-renowned Polytechnic at Zurich.

SOME FEATURES OF EDUCATION IN GERMANY

EDUCATION in Germany has since the War undergone many changes in keeping with the reorganization of the country on democratic lines.

In the secondary schools the study of modern languages has ousted, to a certain extent, that of the classics and in most of the schools two modern languages are compulsory. Stress is also laid on science. The fact that a child must have at least ten years of schooling emphasizes generally the importance the country attaches to a thorough education.

As in the case of the other countries whose education we have briefly described, a good knowledge of the language is necessary in the Government schools for a foreign pupil if he or she is to follow the classes with profit. The same remark applies to the Universities, though it should be noted that many of the latter are now organizing special holiday courses for foreigners. There again a good knowledge of German is presumed.

We give in the following pages particulars of a few selected schools suitable for foreign pupils where children are received having very little knowledge of the language, for whom special arrangements are made.

The number of students going to Germany is steadily increasing. Dresden, München, with their famous art galleries, are regaining their former prominence. Heidelberg too, with its oldest University in Germany and famous College, Wiesbaden and Bonn in Western Germany—to mention only a few—are other popular centres.

The difficulty of finding suitable accommodation in private families, however, remains, and on account of the house shortage and the poverty consequent on the War, families who would like to add to their income by taking students are in many cases prevented from doing so as their means do not allow their maintaining a table suitable to the purpose.

EDUCATION IN ITALY

THE whole system of education in Italy is to all intents and purposes under the complete control of the Government as represented by the Minister of Public Instruction. But in using the word "education" we must make it clear that we mean, in relation to the Government schools, "instruction." Education, embodying the training of character apart from intellect and the playing of outdoor games, is very little practised in these schools and the only substitute for it is an increasing development of the Boy Scout movement.

As in the Italian schools promotion from one class to another, and thereby to the higher technical schools and Universities, depends on the passing of a Government examination at the end of the school year, it is manifest that no foreign pupil, unless he speaks the language fluently, can derive the full benefit from these schools, and unless a career in Italy is intended, such a course would not generally be advisable. We should, however, not omit to say that the instruction given in these schools is invariably of a very high order, comprehensive and thorough.

There is a very large number of ecclesiastical schools and convents for both boys and girls under Italian direction, but these schools follow the Government programme and their pupils, if they wish to pass examinations, must sit for those of the Government.

In view of the above conditions and since the country, on account of its sunny climate and great artistic wealth, is drawing an increasing number of English and American visitors, many private schools have been opened in recent years suitable for English and American girls of all ages and younger boys, where children, in addition to learning the Italian language, can be prepared for the examinations of their own country. In most of these schools, too, French is generally taught. The schools receive day-pupils as well as boarders.

In addition to the above there is a number of home schools, finishing schools and travel schools, particularly in Florence and Rome—to mention only a few centres—and these towns are foremost for the study of painting, drawing and music, for which there are excellent Academies (though it should be noted that in most of the larger towns there is an Academy of Fine Arts and an Academy of Music, both under Government control). Milan too abounds with singing and music masters and will generally be found more suitable for older students who are well advanced.

Mention should also be made of the British Institute in Florence, which offers, in addition to a complete course in English for Italian Students, a series of lectures on Italian Art and Architecture for English Students.

A FEW EXTRACTS FROM PARENTS' LETTERS

regarding the services rendered by "MONDOVER," S.A.

"Mrs. B., on the point of leaving Paris, desires to express her thanks for the help given to her which has resulted in such very satisfactory arrangements. She does not call to express this in person because to do so would be taking up your valuable time."

"Mrs. L. is most obliged for all the information you have given her regarding suitable places in Paris for her daughters. Mrs. L. feels sure that Madame P.'s is just what she wants and has written to arrange with Madame P. to take the two girls for eight or nine months from the middle or end of September. Mrs. L. thanks you very much for the trouble you have taken."

"I cannot tell you how grateful I feel towards you for what you have done. I have had a long letter from my daughter this morning and she seems very happy and comfortable. Kind regards, and again many thanks."

"The boy at C. is getting on very nicely. I can never be thankful enough to you for helping me out in that direction." (Mrs. D. B.)

"Before leaving France I feel I must write and thank you for the arrangements you made for my children's education during the first year in Paris, and inform you that we are very pleased with the result. I may say that I will have much pleasure in referring to you any of my friends who may desire to place their families at school on the continent."

"I have heard from Madame B. and have written to-day to inform her that I think her terms and conditions will suit me very well. I am indebted to you for the trouble you have taken in the matter....."

"I was about to write to you to say that I had fixed up matters with Madame V. and in doing so now I have much pleasure in saying that my son has just taken up his residence there and is very well satisfied with his hosts and with their flat."

"I must thank you very gratefully for your kindness and consideration in helping me round this course as I must admit I found it rather "heavy going" and a great responsibility to place my niece in safe and congenial surroundings" (E. E. B.).

"We were very pleased with the result of our application to you with regard to finding a home school in Paris for our daughter."

"I received your particulars and they told me just what I wanted to know and I have been able with great rapidity to get necessary references and send my daughter off to-day to Madame J. I feel sure this will prove very satisfactory. With many thanks for your help in the matter." (O.M.H.)

"I have decided to send my son to Madame S. I have had excellent references from the persons you mentioned and am very much obliged to you for your help in the matter."

"You remember recommending me to Madame B. de S. My son has been there for six weeks or more and I should like you to know how exceptionally delightful these people are and how much they have interested my boy in all aspects of French life. My son is now talking French fluently." (C. T.)

"I went down to T. and found the school most suitable. I had a conversation with the teachers as a result of which I intend to send my daughter there next January. Your service has been very helpful to me and I shall take pleasure in placing a paragraph of recommendation regarding your organization in the.....where good service is recognized." (E. D. C.)

We hold the originals of these letters and many others at our Office at the disposal of Parents.
